THE TAILIBUS OF JIM SMITH.

Jim Smith had a pain in his stomach one day,
And he sent for assistance doctorium;
As it seemed that Jim Smith had the money to pay
They came one, two, six and some moreum;
And that, if you please, I'll explain is the way
I chance to be telling the storum.

Ipsissimis verbis I hope to outline
The argumentorium following
The advent of medical talent so fine
While Smith with his stomach was wallowing;
And while they were talking poor Jim Smith was tryin'
To keep from explaining and hollowing.
They agreed, ab initio, Smith was in pain,
But they couldn't agree for the life of 'em;
Just what was the cause, and they drove him insane
With materia medica strife of 'em;
That some cutting was needed to them 'twas quite plain
So they all drew the surgical knife of 'em.

'Twas 10 o'clock ante meridian when
J. Piison, medicinae doctor,
Remarked that he had seen quite a lot of sick men,
But Smith was the sickest, by Proctor!
And ad unum omnes they stood with him then
And summoned Smith's partner and shocked her.
"Caeteris Paribus," Doc Slocum declared,
"This man is not like to get wellibus;
Ab uno disce omnes—we'll have his frame bared
And operate on him a spellibus!"
And Smith, where he lay, couldn't help it, but glared,
And said, quite emphatic: "Ole, hellibus!"

They filled him with chloroform up to his toes
And Smith muttered low, de profundis:
"If ever I'm well I will batter your nose,
Doc Slocum, you son-of-a-gundis!"
But Slocum feared neither Jim Smith nor his blows—
He knew they'd meet no more on Mundus!
Doc Slocum was glad as he wielded his knife—
(De gustibus non est disputandum!)
He never had known such a joy in his life
And he cut and he slashed quite at random:
They worked and perspired, while Smith's faithful wife
Stood by with a fanner and fanned 'em.

Doc Slocum dug through in a swift, cheerful way,
For Doc with a knife was a wizard:
But this time it proved 'twas the devil to pay
The way Smith was lanced and was scissored.
Doc thought he had got the appendix, but say,
He'd lopped off a chunk of Smith's gizzard!
Now no man can live when his gizzard is gone,
As everyone's free to admitibus,
And when Slocum saw what he'd foolishly done
He indulged in a professional fitibus;
And all the M. D.'s just began to make fun
Of Slocum, and walked off and quitibus!

A verbis ad verbera they went in a flash
And rolled on the floor in fightorium,
And all the M. D.'s got a cut or a gash,
Which made them a holy sightorium;
And Smith's poor dissected remains went to smash
And were planted that very nightorium!
EPITAPH.
Conquiescat in pace! Here lies poor old Jim;
Materia medica's finished with him.
